The Program in Arabic and Middle Eastern Studies

304 O’Shaughnessy Hall
574.631.7195
arabic@nd.edu
Nearly 300 million people speak Arabic—an official language of more than 20 countries throughout the Middle East and North Africa, as well as the United Nations. Because of its strategic importance, Arabic has been designated a “critical language” by the U.S. State Department. The Arabic language has a rich cultural, intellectual, and religious history that dates back thousands of years. Arabic plays a key role in global communications and international affairs.