And there's much more to English at Notre Dame. Visiting authors including Pulitzer Prize winners and Nobel Laureates. Campuses in London and Dublin, where you can spend a semester—or a year. Preparation for professions from journalism to medicine. And a critical perspective for life.

Reading critically: a skill you need not only to appreciate the greats but also to interpret the “texts”—song lyrics, news reports, TV shows, films, poems, comics, novels, ads—that construct our world.

Covering great authors, yes—Shakespeare, Virginia Woolf, and Chinua Achebe, to name just a few. But uncovering meaning is what we’re all about.

Inquiry is not enough. You need to be able to speak and write—well. So in each class, we teach you how.

For a closer reading, visit us at english.nd.edu