

UNIVERSITY OF
NOTRE DAME

Department of English
Assistant Professor, Romantic Literature

The Department of English at the University of Notre Dame seeks to appoint an assistant professor in Romantic literature, preferably with a specialization in poetry.

The Department of English, with forty full-time faculty, offers programs in all areas of literature in English. Faculty teach two courses a semester, mostly in their areas of specialization and normally including a graduate seminar every other year. Located 90 miles from Chicago, Notre Dame is an international Catholic research university. The University is an equal opportunity educator and employer working to promote an intercultural learning community. We seek outstanding applicants of diverse backgrounds, including women, minorities, persons with disabilities, and those attracted to a university with a Catholic identity. Information about Notre Dame is available at <http://www.nd.edu>.

Salary competitive. Send a letter of application, c.v., and dissertation abstract to John Sitter, Chair, Department of English, 356 O'Shaughnessy, University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, IN 46556. The committee will begin deliberations on materials received by October 30, 2009.
