

UNIVERSITY OF
NOTRE DAME

Department of English
Distinguished Professor in English and American Literature

The English Department at the University of Notre Dame seeks distinguished candidates for its oldest endowed position, the William P. and Hazel B. White Professor of English, beginning as early as the fall of 2010. The Department is looking for an eminent scholar working in any field—or preferably fields—from the Renaissance to the present. We are especially interested in individuals whose work readily puts them into conversation with scholars of various specialties.

The Department of English, with forty full-time teaching and research faculty, offers programs in all areas of literature in English. The University of Notre Dame, located 90 miles from Chicago, is an international Catholic research university. The University is an equal opportunity educator and employer working to promote an intercultural learning community. We seek outstanding applicants of diverse backgrounds, including women, minorities, persons with disabilities, and those attracted to a university with a Catholic identity. Information about Notre Dame is available at <http://www.nd.edu>.

We invite both applications and nominations. Please address correspondence to John Sitter, Chair, Department of English, 356 O'Shaughnessy, University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, IN 46556. The committee will begin reviewing applications received by November 30. The search will continue until the position is filled.
