"Art History at Notre Dame is a great, diverse curriculum. It's such a fascinating field of study, especially if you want to look at history not from just the textbook but from what people were talking about, what people were producing, and what people thought was worthy of painting and sculpting.

"Art History has provided me with so much background for analysis of visual imagery, analysis of a problem that's depicted in sculpture or a painting or architecture. It really teaches you how to solve a problem, and how other people have solved a problem. That's really what a lot of art is — it's solving a problem for a very specific context."
