The Office of International Studies can help you develop a more global perspective through study abroad, summer sessions, and related activities on campus.

Did you know?
- Notre Dame students can participate in more than 40 academic programs in 20 countries.
- More than 60% of Arts and Letters students participate in study abroad programs—one of the highest rates among all universities across the nation.

From classes to independent research to cultural engagement, the experience of studying and living abroad is integral to a liberal arts education and is key to broadening your intellectual and cultural horizons.
